Try New Plan To Make Tap Water Palatable

Water Gets Worse, Health Department Helps, Council Worried

COMPLAIN ABOUT SMELL

The town water is worse rather than better, according to opinions expressed around the town council table on Tuesday evening. A report from Dr. A. E. Berry, of the provincial department of health, was before the council. "They intend to put this silica into the mains and it stops the water eating the iron off the mains," said Councillor W. W. Osborne, chairman of the water and light committee. "The smell of the water is worse," said Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale. "Much worse," said N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor. "It's stuff off the mains that causes it," said Councillor Frank Robinson.

WILL EXAMINE AGED

There will be no admission to York County House of Refuge, Yonge St., without medical examination, in the future, the town council learned on Tuesday evening.

"It's the water, something in the water that reacts on the mains," said Mr. Mathews. "Where does it pick up the smell?" asked Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

"It smells worse from upstairs taps than down," said Mr. Mathews. Mr. Mathews said the water had been worse the last ten days.

"What can we do about the water?" asked Councillor Wm. Dixon later in the meeting. "Some people say the water is good. Others say it is bad."

"The department of health is preparing a solution to put in the water," replied Mr. Mathews.

VIRTUOUS END WRONG MEANS SAYS PASTOR

Games Of Chance Aren't Right Way To Raise Funds, He Says

DR. MCINTYRE WRITES

The Era has received the following letter from Rev. Dr. D. McIntyre, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

Editor, The Era:—Since coming home I read in the town papers how the Lions club raised $550 for the needy children of the town. It was a matter of deep regret to me and I am sure to every right-thinking man and woman in town that such a worthy cause should be supported by such unworthy means as games of chance. I have no doubt that members of the club, many of them church members, must have been carried away with the end in view, that they overlooked the means employed. While their oversight "leaned to virtue's side," nevertheless, they committed a great wrong against childhood.

I scarcely think that any of them would like their own children to follow in their footsteps and make money by methods condemned by church and state. I do not know of any crime that is more severely condemned and punished in the Bible than the sin against childhood. In Luke 17:2 we read: "It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones."

Sincerely yours,
D. McIntyre.

IMPOSITION ON PUBLIC - MAYOR

Sending members of the family to hospital and allowing the town to foot the bill is getting to be a habit, according to members of the town council, discussing the admission of the baby of a Newmarket family to a Toronto hospital, at a meeting Tuesday evening.

"There are so many in the factories get their hospitalization paid, and then the next week someone else with no more money pays it himself," commented Councillor Wm. Dixon. "There is nothing to prevent us keeping after these people and making them pay us," said Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale. "So far as the hospital is concerned, we have to pay it."

"It's an imposition on the public," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

"Why don't you instruct the clerk to press them?" asked Mr. Vale.

"We'll have to," said Mr. Dixon. "If they are getting enough to garnishee, instruct the clerk to go after them," said Mr. Vale. "What is the amount for garnishee?" asked the mayor. "Fifteen dollars a week," said N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor.

The case was accepted, but no other action was taken.

RESUMES PULPIT

Dr. D. McIntyre occupied his own pulpit last Sunday for the first time since his vacation. He gave his audience, some of the great thoughts that were given by several of the preachers at Chautauque, N.Y., and elsewhere. In the course of his remarks he referred with deep feeling to the sudden and untimely death of Rev. J. H. Wells, pastor of Trinity church, and said that the town mourned the passing of a stalwart Christian gentleman, with quiet but firm and strong virtues and courteous graces. Reference also was made to the sad accident that had befallen him, and to the fact that he was a devoted husband and father.

WILL MEET THURSDAY

The regular monthly meeting of the Newmarket Women's Institute will be held at the home of Mrs. Milton Cook, Prospect Ave., next Thursday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock.

The topic chosen is "Canadianization" and the roll call will be answered by naming the country our forefathers came from. The ladies are invited to come and spend a profitable time.

HOLD COMMUNION

There will be no Sunday-school classes at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on Sunday, nor will there be a service in the evening. Communion service will be held on Sunday, Sept. 19.

Cancel School Fairs Because Of Epidemic

No Fairs In York County This Year, W. M. Cockburn States

APPLICATIONS POUR IN

Four electric light service applications, one water service application and one sewer connection application were before the town council on Tuesday evening. No doubt the cancelling of the fairs for this year will be a disappointment to a great many of the 4,000 children, many of whom have already prepared their exhibits of writing and art before holidays or who have been training and grooming their calves or tending their vegetable garden or grain plots in anticipation of the fair.

Plans will be commenced at once for next year's school fairs to be held as usual.

Schools Will Reopen On Monday, M.O.H. Announces

No More Cases Of Infantile Paralysis, Medical Officer Reports

Newmarket schools will open on Monday, Dr. J. H. Wesley, M.O.H., stated today. This step is being taken with the approval of W. H. Eves, chairman of the public school board, at whose request the board of health ordered the schools closed.

There are no more cases of infantile paralysis, Dr. Wesley stated.

A clinic was opened at the Stuart Scott school this week and a large number of parents have availed themselves of the opportunity to secure medical advice. The service is free of charge.

Absences Force Closing Schools, Clinic Endorsed

Board Of Health Acts On Request Of Public School Board

All Newmarket schools were closed last Friday at noon by the order of Dr. J. H. Wesley, M.O.H., acting on a request from the public school board. Dr. Wesley stated that he did not approve of closing the schools, but that he wanted to co-operate with the public school board.

Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd called a meeting of the town council at noon on Friday following the sudden death of 15-year-old Wallace Cutting on Thursday night with infantile paralysis and the pleading of the Cutting home on Eagle St.

"We are going to start a clinic," Dr. Boyd announced to members of the council. "People expect us to do something."

"Quite right," said Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales. "There is no place in town to make a spinal puncture."

"Closing anything is a negative process," Dr. Boyd said. "It doesn't get you anywhere."

"There were 50 pupils absent from the public schools this morning," said Dr. Dales. "We don't get our grant for those pupils unless the board of health orders the schools closed. And the schools will have to repeat the work."

Dr. J. C. R. Edwards, a member of the public school board, and Dr. J. H. Wesley, M.O.H., were present at the meeting by special invitation.

"We are going to start a clinic," Dr. Boyd said. "Rich and poor will be treated alike. We will do whatever can be done."

"What about the theatres?" asked N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor.

"That is their own affair," remarked Councillor Frank Robinson.

"They should be kept at home up to 15 years," said Dr. Dales. "Make it 10," said Dr. Wesley. "The Sunday-schools should be closed too."

WOMAN BREAKS WRIST

Mrs. Alex Chalmers of Sarnia had her wrist broken on Saturday when the car in which she and her husband were driving crashed head-on into another car, on Yonge St. near Bradford.

GIVE PRIZES FOR BOUQUET

The Poplar Bank Junior Farmers and Junior Institute are meeting at Sharon Hall Monday evening, Sept. 13, at 8 p.m. standard time. The girls are offering a prize to the member exhibiting the best dining-room bouquet. The boys are having their annual election of officers.

ELDER GOES TO CITY

J. Y. Garrett, one of the elders of St. Andrew's church, has accepted a position in Toronto and will leave this week. Mr. Garrett was trained as a missionary in Belfast, Ireland, and preached several times in Newmarket and at the Industrial home each month and every Sunday night at Holland Landing.

"Could we have a statement from the M.O.H. regarding the present situation?" asked Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale.

"There are no cases at the present time," said Dr. Wesley. "One case died."

"Was the board of health aware of this case when school opened on Wednesday?" asked Mr. Vale. "No," said Dr. Wesley. "This epidemic may last until January," said Dr. Boyd. "The Page 4, Col. 5"

TOWN PROPERTIES CHANGE OWNERSHIP

E. A. Boyd, reitor, reports the sale of several properties recently. The house and lot of Mrs. Fee at Simeone St. has been sold to Cecil Leppard, who will take possession on Oct. 1. Frank Williamson of the Newmarket Dairy has bought the house and lot of the late Joseph Phipper estate at 49 Gorman St. and will take possession on Oct. 1.

Part of lot 17 on the eighth concession of King township and part of lot 17 on the ninth concession, wonderfully located on Loch Erne Lake and on highway No. 27, the property of Mrs. Hillard, has been purchased by Mr. Carroll of Toronto. The new owner plans to remodel the building and make a lovely home on the property.

BINNS RINK LOSES IN FIN. OFF AT STOUFVILLE

Two Toronto rinks took first two prizes at the mixed rink tournament for the J. O. Little cup on Monday. Nineteen rinks took part.

J. Scott's rink was first and Hall's rink second. A rink consisting of H. B. Marshall, Mrs. Marshall and Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Gilman won third. Dillane, Toltenham, was fourth.

There will be a Scotch doubles tournament Monday night at 7 p.m.

A Newmarket rink, skipped by G. A. Binns, and consisting of W. L. Bosworth, Stanley James and Fred Chantler, tied for first with 10 points at Stouffville yesterday. In a play-off, a Sutton rink, skipped by Burkholder, took the trophy. The local rink was second for three wins.

BUILD 18-LANE STREETS, SAVE OLD BUILDINGS

Russia Builds World's Highest Building And Largest Canal

SHOES ARE A LUXURY

"In the first place, there is so much going on in Russia at the present time that almost anything anybody says about Russia will probably be true," Joseph McCulley, headmaster of Pickering College, told The Era last week following his return from a European trip with some of his students and former students. "The thing that struck me was that you could pick out any set of facts that suited you and make any case you wanted to," Mr. McCulley said. "It is difficult to make a fair statement. Their standard of living is low, but you must understand that they are trying to lift themselves out of the 16th century by their own boot-straps into modern industrial civilization."

"There is tremendous activity. Also there is a tremendous effort to supply consumers' goods. Last year they turned out an average of one pair of shoes for every inhabitant, that is, 170,000,000 pairs of shoes. Of course, some people had more than one pair of shoes, and some had none. Shoes are quite a luxury for many people."

"They are getting their factories into the manufacture of textiles. Some of the materials are quite pretty. There is a tremendous demand for these things, which to the western mind are necessities, to the Russian luxuries. Russians as a whole look to the standard of living of the rest of Europe as an ideal, and they will not be satisfied until they get it."

"Tourists get five roubles for a dollar," Mr. McCulley said, referring to a recent discussion of the value of the rouble. "That means that the rouble is worth 20 cents, but it isn't fair to say that is the purchasing value of the rouble. For instance, just for the fun of it we priced a chocolate bar one night. It was five roubles and 80 kopecks, or to us, $1.25, too expensive to buy. To a Russian that would probably be the equivalent of 20 or 25 cents."

The high rate for roubles simply means that Russia is trying to get all the foreign exchange she can. "But that does not make travelling in Russia impossible high. All tourist arrangements are under tourist. There are special arrangements, special hotels. Prices are high but the actual cost of the stay in Russia is not high. For first-class travel it is $15 a day; second-class, $8; third-class, $5. We were travelling third-class."

"We have plenty to eat, but not much variety. The accommodation was adequate. In Leningrad we were located in a pre-revolutionary hotel, which must have been the centre of a good deal of life in the old days. We had a suite, finished in gilt, with gold-plated candelabra. The bathroom was like the living-room in a small house."

"Another interesting thing is the fact that all art treasures are being preserved with scrupulous care. We visited a wonderful palace in Leningrad, converted into an art museum. Art treasures have been brought there from all over Europe. They have in the winter palace one of the finest art galleries in Europe, not excluding the Louvre in Paris. The Page 3, Col. 5"

G. C. F. STARTS BALL ROLLING

The C.C.F., advertising itself as the farmer-labor party, is the first political organization to hold a public meeting in Newmarket since Premier Hepburn named the election day.

The C.C.F. is bringing here on Saturday night, to speak in the town hall, the widely known E. J. Garland, ex-M.P. for Bow River, Alta., Arthur Williams, ex-reeve of East York township, a keen-witted speaker, and Kenneth Ross, Mount Albert, the candidate.

SOFTBALLERS ENTERTAINED SEE TORONTO TRIMMED

Marking the celebration of a successful year, members of the Newmarket softball team, along with the club executives, journeyed to Toronto for a night's outing on Thursday evening of last week.

Leaving Newmarket at six o'clock the group motored to the Maple Leaf ball stadium to attend the floodlight game between Buffalo and Toronto Maple Leafs. Thursday night being "Radio Appreciation Night," a number of sporting events accompanied by prearrangements, were witnessed before the game got under way.

The game itself was a keenly contested affair with Toronto out-hitting Buffalo 7-5, but failing to bunch their hits at the most opportune time, and finishing on the short end of a 2-0 score.

After the game the Newmarketers made their way to a first-class restaurant and there did justice to a hearty meal before returning home.

DENY RUMOR

A rumor has been abroad in the neighborhood of the Gamble Road that Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Banks were suffering from infantile paralysis. This report is incorrect and the persons concerned wish to contradict the rumor.

Sharon, Mount Albert Begin Series Tonight

Keswick Put Out Of Running In Lake Simcoe Softball Playdowns

GAMES PROVE CLOSE

Sharon and Mount Albert open the finals struggle for supremacy of the Lake Simcoe softball league at Sharon tonight. It will be a two out of three games battle with the second game taking place at Mount Albert probably on Saturday night.

Mount Albert took their deciding game against the league-leading Keswick team on neutral territory at Sharon on Saturday night in an exciting game. Keswick got two runs in the second and five in the third. Mount Albert got one in the second. At the end of the fifth the score still stood at 7-1 for Keswick.

With the Mount Albert fans shouting themselves hoarse, the Mounties tied up the score in the sixth and got the winning run in the seventh, leaving the score 8-7.

The Sharon-Willow Beach series was one-when Willow Beach defeated Sharon at Willow Beach 7-1 on Friday night.

The third game, played at Mount Albert on Tuesday night, was full of thrills.

Sharon got two in the first.

SNEEZERS BLAME FOLKS WHO DIDN'T CUT WEEDS

Many of Newmarket's citizens are suffering unnecessarily from hay fever, according to Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale.

"Next year the weed inspector should see that rag-weed is properly cut," Mr. Vale told the town council on Monday evening. "I will have Sloss or the weed inspector see to it now," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

Both teams scored one run in the second. Sharon got three in the third, making the score 6-1. Willow Beach got one in the first half of the fifth and three in the seventh and two in the eighth, leaving the count 7-6 for the Beaches. Sharon took two in the eighth to make it 8-7.

Ross Eves made three runs, and had a perfect batting record with four hits on four times at bat. Don Smith, Stan Roberts and Bill Newfield did the rest of the scoring.

Jack Smith, Sharon catcher, turned in a great game. Jim McElvey on first sack and Cecil McNeil, pitching, turned in outstanding performances for Willow Beach.

Streets Repaired Cheaply, Mayor Boyd Tells Council

Keep Within $2,500 Estimate Councillor Robinson States

The total cost of a proposed new sewer on Timothy St. will be $75, according to an estimate made by W. B. Redfern, town engineer, N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor, reported to the town council on Tuesday evening.

"It's not worth the expense of getting out debentures," said Mr. Mathews, suggesting that he would get the property-owners concerned to make an agreement as to payment.

"Why is it necessary to have an engineer up to see that little sewer on Timothy St.?" asked Councillor Wm. Dixon.

"We have him on annual salary, haven't we?" asked Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

"No," said Councillor W. W. Osborne.

"If done as a local improvement, an engineer is necessary," said Mr. Mathews. "If it isn't done as a local improvement, Mr. Redfern said that he would make $2,500."

TAG DAY FIRST SATURDAY IN OCTOBER PLANNED

To get the new juvenile bugle band away to a good start, a tag day will be held on Saturday, Oct. 2. Roy Rhinehart, of the U.S.A. Bugle Band, secured permission from the town council on Tuesday evening.

"We have 58 boys applying for membership in the new band," said Mr. Rhinehart. "The epidemic has slowed us up a bit. We figure that we can put another bugle band on the streets next spring, and we don't have to buy any instruments."

no charge."

"The streets have been fixed satisfactorily, and below the estimate, I understand," Councillor Frank Robinson, chairman of the public works committee, reported to the council.

"I think that was a very good deal," said Dr. Boyd. "The company was talking about $3,000 or $4,000. The repairs are all done and properly done for less than $2,500."

Typewriters Stolen From High School, Glass Broken

Believed Two Men Broke Into High School Commercial Room

Breaking into Newmarket high school on Sunday night burglars took two typewriters out of the commercial department.

It is thought that two men made the break-in. They tried to break the door, but only succeeded in splitting the veneering and leaving boot marks on the door. Finally they broke the glass in the window and entered that way. The typewriters have blind key-boards.

Decision To Start Co-op Made At Second Meeting

Committee To Secure Members For Co-Operative Named

A decision to go ahead with a co-operative retail store in Newmarket, under the name of the York District Co-operative, was reached, and a committee was appointed, by a meeting of about 30 persons at Pickering College on Tuesday evening.

Whether the proposed new store would operate independently or in conjunction with the Aurora District Co-operative store was left to be decided by the local members when secured.

The objective of the committee will be 100 members, paying $1 each, and sufficient capital through the sale of shares at $5 each.

"I want the first ten shares," said Wesley Williams of Bogart-town.

WOULD BUY GARAGE

An offer was received from Bethel West, Holland Landing, to purchase for $5 a garage belonging to the town on Ontario St., at a town council meeting Tuesday evening. The offer was referred to the public works committee.

"I'll take five," offered Edgar Dennis, Newmarket farmer. Members of the committee named are G. N. T. Widdington, Fred Thompson, Bruce McClymont, Milton Cook, Mrs. Arthur Boyd, Cecil Leppard, Edgar Dennis, Ross Armitage, Pine Orchard, Arthur Lomas, Mrs. John Skinner, Cedar Valley, J. W. Brown.

"Vagabond" Is Home After 14,000 Mile Car Journey

Drought Conditions, Beauty Of B. C., Gaspe And N. S. Recalled

The "vagabonds," R. H. Perry, Newmarket, of the staff of Pickering College, and Graham McInnes, Toronto, delivered last evening from Toronto the last of 12 broadcasts describing their motor-car journey from Atlantic to Pacific for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Mr. Perry arrived home on Sunday night after giving the 11th broadcast at Lethbridge last Wednesday night.

"The word 'vagabonds' was not a very apt description, as we had only four and a half days of each week to make our next broadcasting point," Mr. Perry said. "We didn't have any time to waste. It took us a day and a half to contact the station officials, to pick up local information, to write our continuity and to rehearse."

"We got a good deal of information talking to gas station attendants, and to the people at places where we ate. We picked up 28 hitch-hikers altogether."

Politics, religion, local grievances were unmentionable subjects for the radio broadcasts. The vagabonds left Toronto on June 14 for Halifax, scene of their first broadcast, and then travelled westward, broadcasting from Fredericton, Gaspe, Toronto, Sudbury, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Calgary, Trail and Vancouver.

While they had to drop down to the United States when they reached the Sea, they made the journey through the mountains of British Columbia entirely by Canadian, though devious and crude, highways or trails.

"From Banff we went through the Kicking Horse Pass, south along the Columbia river to Cranbrook, along the Kootenay river beside the U.S. border, then north alongside the Kootenay lakes, by ferry to Nelson and then to Trail and on to Vancouver," Mr. Perry said. "It is really a very, very beautiful country, although there are three or four miles of desert. Then suddenly you burst upon an almost tropical rain, where there is plenty of rain."

In physical features British Columbia is most amazing of all the provinces. British

W. C. T. U. WILL MEET

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held at the home of Mrs. Wilson Leppard, north Main St., on Tuesday, at 3 o'clock. Members are asked to make a special effort to be present to discuss the work for the coming season.

WEINERS AND HEP ROASTED

About 125 persons attended the Ladies' Conservative Association weiner roast at the home of Mrs. Alex. Rutledge on Tuesday. Ideal weather conditions and a huge bonfire made a perfect setting for a sing-song which was enjoyed by all. Among the speakers were Dr. S. J. Boyd, Mrs. Frank Hope, president of the association, Mrs. Train of Nobleton, vice-president of the central organization of North York, Clifford Case, Aurora, Jack Sibbald, Sutton, and the provincial candidate, Major Alex. MacKenzie, who scored the record of the Hepburn government.

Columbia and Quebec, and possibly Nova Scotia, were the most interesting provinces. We saw only one hitch-hiker in Nova Scotia. Apparently there is a law against it.

"Nine-tenths of the roads we travelled were gravel, with the result that we blew out three tires, and had ten flats," Mr. Perry recalled. Mr. Perry's companion could not operate a car, and he himself drove the entire 14,000 miles which his car, now when he started in June, now registers.

Mr. Perry saw new meaning in the description, "heavy duty tire," when coming back from Lethbridge through the United States and put it on his car. He saved the old tire to show the customs officers that it was a case of necessity, but he had to pay $0.10 duty.

"But I had wanted to buy a tire in the United States, with a plenty of rain."

HEPBURN RECORD

It was a wonderfully convincing story that Mr. Hepburn had to tell at the nominating convention at Richmond Hill on Saturday night, with one exception. He had a story to tell of millions of dollars collected in succession duties and turned back to the people in tax reductions, effective and prospective. He had a story to tell of increasing revenues, a balanced budget and a reduced debt. The applause of those picked party men, delegates to the convention, was distinctly weak and scattered, however, when Mr. Hepburn declared that he preferred to see drinking done in public, out in the open, under government supervision, with the implication that the beverage rooms had just transformed illicit drinking into legal drinking and not affected the volume.

Protecting Youth

Mr. Hepburn said that the Henry government had tried to make beer an issue in the last election and that he had taken the question out of politics by accepting their plank. The Henry government had planned to give beer licenses to restaurants, but he had not done so, Mr. Hepburn said. He believed in protecting youth from this evil, Mr. Hepburn also said. Mr. Hepburn neglected to mention that he had abolished beer and wine permits, and had thereby made the work of police in checking up on bootleggers much more difficult.

Liquor Advertising

Mr. Hepburn also said that he had not permitted the advertising of liquor in Ontario, but is this true? At the present time he is permitting a hypocritical advertising campaign by the brewing industry in the interests of "true temperance," when everyone knows that the real purpose of the campaign is to try to stem the rising tide of indignation against the beverage rooms and drinking driving. The real purpose is to maintain and increase the sale of alcohol. The most recent advertisement contains the statement: "People are going to drink, you know." Of course they are going to drink as long as individuals or governments make money out of it. The advertisement calls temperance workers and prohibitionists, "agitators." About the "few people" who "don't know when to stop," the advertisement says: "Laws won't change these people. But in time education will reduce their number, stop young people growing up in their footsteps." But who is supplying the education? The money to educate people as to the effect of alcohol on mind and limb should come out of the immense revenues received from its sale, if sold it must be, just as the money to push the cause of the beverage rooms is coming out of its sale.

Beer For Mothers

It is a wonder to us how the people who write those "true temperance education" advertisements, the people who pay for them, and the people with money invested in the brewing industry can sleep at night. We wonder how Mr. Hepburn himself can sleep at night when he tells us at Richmond Hill that the beverage rooms are a big attraction to the (motoring) tourist industry and his department of highways advises the public: If you drive, don't drink; if you drink, don't drive. Mr. Hepburn said that his government had thought of closing the beverage rooms to women but they had found that this would be offensive to the tourist industry.

Out of Politics?

Mr. Hepburn made what he called an "important announcement." He said that if returned to office he would appoint a supreme court judge, a Liberal member of the legislature and an opposition member as a non-political liquor commission and take the liquor question out of politics. We understood that he meant he would do this if Mr. Rowe would undertake to do likewise. The suggestion is unconstructive. It would be just a nice way for the government of the day to avoid responsibility for the administration of this controversial measure. If Mr. Hepburn would undertake to appoint an independent liquor commission and give it all the revenues from the sale of liquor to be used for temperance education he would be doing something, but to think that he can take the question out of politics as long as government liquor sales are an important source of government revenue is not to think deeply. For instance, would he permit such a commission to do what he wouldn't permit himself to do, to close the beverage rooms to women, or to do anything else that interfered with government revenues?

Not Settled Yet

Prohibition at the present time is not practical and when sufficient whole-hearted and enthusiastic government education on the subject has been done to make it practical prohibition may be unnecessary, but on the other hand the present situation, with private individuals making money out of the manufacture of liquor and of beer and wine, and out of the sale of beer and wine, and the government pushing sales, will not be long tolerated. For Mr. Hepburn to propose to take the question out of politics at this stage, in other words, to maintain the status quo, is as though he were to retire from a poker game in mid-evening, with his winnings piled high, just as the luck had begun to turn against him.

SCHOOL NURSE

Everyday needs are often emphasized in times of crisis. For the couple of days last week that the schools were open a nurse was engaged by the board of health to visit the schools to report on any cases of apparent illness or neglect on the part of parents to take proper care of their children. Dr. Wesley, Newmarket's M.O.H., explained to the town council that the nurse would find skin conditions that needed attention, malnutrition and other circumstances that should be brought to the attention of parents and, if necessary, to their family doctors. He also said that the nurse would go to homes where children were absent on account of illness and advise parents whether or not they should call their doctor.

Needed All the Time

It would seem that a school nurse would be a profitable investment at any time. A nurse is particularly useful when there is an epidemic about, but could perform almost as great services at all times of the school year. When children are home ill, the school board loses part of its grant, and the children suffer the loss of valuable school days. Little illnesses often lead too to permanent infirmities. A nurse, administering an ounce of preventive advice, would save parents many a pound of worry and work over a sick bed. A nurse would cost money, of course, a good part of a mill on the tax rate, but would save many parents and the community as a whole much more than that in the long run. For instance, the prevention of two or three cases of tuberculosis which might have become hospital cases and charges of the town treasury would pay a nurse's salary. Tuberculosis is perhaps more common among those who have left school and started work, but it is quite possible that these cases would be fewer if their health during school years had been more carefully watched.

Isolation Ward

Another everyday need is suggested by Dr. Wesley, and that is an isolation ward at the York County hospital. During the present paralysis epidemic there has been a pressing need for an isolation hospital or ward. These crises are continually recurring, making an isolation ward practically an everyday need. It is said that the hospital also badly needs an obstetrical ward, and that plans are being made to provide the needed extra accommodation.

Dreams Come True

Only a few years ago a hospital in Newmarket was regarded as an impossible dream, and yet today it would seem impossible to do without it. Where would all the accident cases be taken? How could many people afford to go to city hospitals? What a hardship it would often be to have friends and relatives in city hospitals where they could be visited only at considerable expense! Great credit must be given to those who dreamed the dream which is now York County hospital and to those who made the dream a reality. York County hospital, through good management, has proved itself a worth-while institution and is in an excellent financial position, and new accommodation, to care for the needs of this district, is not likely to be long delayed.

A CO-OPERATIVE STORE

What are we to say about a retail co-operative store in Newmarket? A movement is on foot to establish such a store, and with the example of a very successful store in the neighboring town of Aurora it is no use pretending that such a store would not hurt people in business already. What is a local newspaper to say about such a movement? A successful co-operative store, gradually widening its range of goods, might eventually take from a local newspaper some of its most important local advertisers, without itself becoming an important advertiser. More than that, one of the ultimate aims of the co-operative movement is to eliminate competitive national advertising. As advertising is a newspaper's most important source of revenue, the co-operative movement may be a threat to the existence of local newspapers or might force the public, if it wants a local newspaper, to pay more for it.

Should We Protest?

Should we write in defence of ourselves, and our neighbors down the Main St., advising people to have nothing to do with a co-operative store, or would it be like trying to sweep back the Atlantic? One of the speakers at the co-operative meeting last week quoted the great Japanese, Kagawa, as saying that if people would be Christians let them go out and organize co-operative stores. We are not sure of the ethical basis of the co-operative movement's claim to being Christian, particularly when it is competing with other businesses; but we can see that if it eventually forced all competing business to the wall, as it quite possibly may do, a nation of co-operatives, that is, of industries and retail outlets owned by their customers, would be more harmonious and neighborly and Christian than a nation of competitors.

The Co-Operative Idea

The co-operative movement may be idealistic but it also happens to be based on very practical, hard-headed business ideas. The co-operative store has a scheme for bringing its customers back regularly, and for increasing its customers, and what store wouldn't like to have such a scheme. The principle, of course, is to give the store's profits back to its customers in proportion to their purchases. In other words, the co-operative store, after paying its dividends, has sold at cost. Selling at cost, once a store gets well established, assures the store of a big turnover, and the big turnover keeps the cost low.

An Economic Answer

Perhaps the co-operative movement, which aims gradually to operate its own wholesales and its own manufacturing plants, turning its profits over to those whose needs are greatest (that is, those who buy from the retail stores) instead of to people who may already have more money than they can spend, has a real solution for our economic problems. Co-operative stores have something worth-while to offer the public and are probably just as inevitable as were the chain stores. Fortunately, however fine they may be, their growth will be gradual and privately-owned stores and newspapers will have time to adjust themselves to changing business conditions.

Miss A. W. Wellwood of Wingham has been visiting her sister, Mrs. D. Idle of Aurora, also Miss Eva and Master Harry Wellwood of Scarborough. They left by train yesterday for Toronto.

Rev. Mr. Taylor of Midland was the guest of Mr. Inspector Ganton on Thursday of last week and he gave a very interesting and enthusiastic address at the Methodist prayer meeting in the evening.

Miss Morrison, daughter of Mr. B. F. Morrison, returned from Erie, Pa., on the late train last Saturday night, for a couple of weeks visit among her old friends. Prof. Daggart and wife of the same place accompanied her and are much pleased with the appearance of the locality and the thrift manifested by our citizens.

Miss Eliza Madden, youngest daughter of Mr. Matthew Madden, went to Toronto to spend her holidays among her brothers and sisters. While there she was attacked with diphtheria and in ten days was dead. She was buried in St. Michael's cemetery, Toronto, on Sunday last. Mrs. Madden is still in the city. He also remarked there could be no mistake made by investing money in a town that has the schools, conveniences and growth of Newmarket. Cora Calls Down A Handsome Fellow

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"I wonder what Handsome, the Blue Jay, has been doing all summer?" said Hattie Nuthatch to her friend, Cora Chickadee, one September day.

"Oh, that villain has been busy bringing up another family of villains, somewhere away off in the woods," was her friend's reply, "and I'm certainly glad that I haven't been seeing him very often."

"Well, I just saw him flying and heard him screaming, a few minutes ago," said Hattie, "so I guess his family has pretty well grown up and he is gallivanting in public, again."

"I remember the last time I saw him very well," said Cora. "He came around hunting for food for his family, I suppose. They were very young then. I thought maybe he had designs on one of our young ones and I flew at him as fiercely as I could. The Blue Jays do sometimes eat the young fledgling birds, you know, and I wasn't going to let him get any of ours. They eat more young ones and bird's eggs in the spring and summer than at any other time, they say, because, of course, that's the time that they're out hunting for their families."

"Oh, I've heard that they don't do much of that at all," said Hattie.

"Well, I know they do," contradicted Cora. "It's true that of what they eat, only about a quarter, or less, of it is animal matter, and the rest is vegetable, but they do sometimes steal young birds. Why, I heard that Handsome caught a young House Wren just this year. The whole neighborhood was horrified."

"Sh! Sh!" whispered Hattie suddenly. "Speak of the devil..." "Why, how do you do, little ladies?" Handsome, for it was he, said in greeting. "I haven't seen you for quite some time."

"No, and we haven't been breaking our hearts over it either," said Hattie boldly. "Isn't that a crumb of eggshell on your beak? Don't tell me you were able to find eggs to steal at this time of year?"

"Certainly not," answered Handsome indignantly. "That's only a bit of shell that a chicken had discarded and that I found in a farmyard. That just proves what I've always maintained—that folks believe the very worst of the Blue Jay clan, when we're really the nicest birds. We often warn you other folks of danger and not only that, but we eat all sorts of harmful things, too."

"I wouldn't call a little House Wren a harmful thing," put in Cora.

Handsome looked a trifle taken aback at this remark but answered calmly.

"I was referring to all the insects, bugs, grasshoppers and caterpillars I eat. I even eat tent caterpillars."

"Is that the sort of food you've been eating lately?" questioned Hattie.

"Of course," replied Handsome. "In August I specialize on grasshoppers. Now that autumn has come I gorge myself on nuts, particularly acorns. I just love acorns," he added, smacking his bill. "I've been doing a little harvesting today, storing nuts in tree crevices—it's great sport."

"Humph!" snorted Hattie. "I'll bet you never go back to them again. You're just being a dog in the manger."

"And how about the corn you eat?" asked Cora. "I notice that you're not mentioning that."

"Oh, my beak and feathers! How you folks malign me," Handsome snorted in his turn. "I only eat that occasionally and then it's usually after the farmers have got their harvest in. I'd just as soon have a nice juicy little mouse as some corn."

"Ugh!" shuddered Cora. "And what else do you eat? Your diet seems horrible to me."

"Oh, the odd fish or maybe a little tree frog sometimes," answered Handsome. "I have quite a varied bill of fare. That's why I'm so good-looking."

"You're good-looking," admitted Cora, "but you're a cannibal and although Chips sometimes says a good word for you, I can never agree with him." Handsome said at that moment, ignoring Cora's gibe. "See those two boys. They seem to be stealing along as quietly as they can. I wonder what they're up to. I must rush over and see."

"He's one of the most inquisitive people I know," said Cora. "He rushes to find out what's happening every time and then if he thinks he's found an enemy he screams the news to the world in general."

"It comes in useful, sometimes too, don't forget," said Hattie. "Yes," admitted Cora. "We ought to be grateful to Handsome for his warnings, I guess. Listen to him shrieking now. He must have decided that those boys were up to mischief. Let's go over and see."

When Cora and Hattie had cautiously arrived near enough to the boys to hear what they were saying, they heard loud expressions of disgust.

"Darn that Blue Jay anyway," one was saying. "Just as we were going to get a lovely close view of that Rose-breasted Grosbeak through these field glasses, that old Jay had to poke his nose into our business and scare the bird away. I'd like to give that Jay a piece of my mind."

"Just as I say," said Cora. "He's a nuisance and a busybody, as well as a cannibal. Those boys weren't doing any harm."

"Still," remarked her friend, "the way Handsome flies gally around the country at this time of year, flaunting his lovely blue suit, is rather nice, I think. I believe we'd miss him if we didn't have him around."

The Department of Health has a sufficient supply of Convalescent Serum for present demands. This serum is obtained from persons who have previously suffered from an attack of "infantile paralysis".

In anticipation of further requirements the Department now requests that persons who are willing to provide blood for this purpose (donors) register with the medical officer of health in their district.

The Department remunerates donors on the basis of Ten Dollars for 100 cubic centimeters; the usual amount withdrawn from one donor is 200 cubic centimeters. This can be readily obtained without discomfort or ill effects to the donor.

Children under fourteen years of age are not eligible. Persons who have suffered an attack of the disease during the present year are also not eligible. Those persons fourteen years of age and over who have suffered an attack within the past twenty-five years and who show some definite evidence of resulting paralysis, are requested to provide the medical officer of health with their name and address.

Those who have already acted as donors need not register again.

When a clinic is to be held, donors will be notified through their medical officer of health.

SCOTT TOWNSHIP SCOTT FIGHTS TAX REDUCTION

Scott township council met on Saturday, Sept. 4. All members were present.

Communications were read from Dr. Wilson, Uxbridge, advising he would not have sent account for attendance to council had he understood the circumstances; from official receiver, Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act advising two persons who had applied for adjustment of debts; from Miss E. A. McKay, county treasurer, requesting return of tax arrears; from County clerk Ruddy notifying of the admission of a patient from Scott to Oshawa General Hospital; from Home Telephone Co. with form of contract should Council desire to install a phone in clerk's office.

Correspondence was read regarding claim of Walter Durstan for damage to auto through culvert out of repair. Blueprint for constructing bridge on Ashworth sideline was before the council.

The newly appointed treasurer presented his declaration of office duly signed and declared to. Action of the board of Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act in extending time on taxes came in for considerable discussion, and a resolution was passed to be forwarded to the official receiver, as follows: "That the taxes due on farms coming before official receiver be not reduced or in any way adjusted, as we understand it would not be following the statutes of Ontario."

A by-law was passed appointing Herbert Harrison collector of taxes at a salary of $150 per annum.

Accounts passed included: road expenditure, $146.25; J. R. Meyers, staples, 80 cents; North Ontario Plowmen's Association grant, $25; Harvey Leek, two sheep killed by dogs, $20; Fred Watts, valuing same, $1; Bert Blackburn, one sheep killed by dogs, $10; W. S. Kennedy, valuing same, $1.

The council adjourned to meet on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 2.

A political speaker, warning the public against the imposition of heavier tariffs on imports, said, "If you don't stop shearing the wool off the sheep that lays the golden egg, you'll pump it dry."

Here Today, Gone Tomorrow
Sam had been carpenter at a provincial theatre for about half a century, and the proprietors thought it was time he retired on a pension. But Sam chose to consider himself insulted by the well meant offer.

ZEPHYR SAYS CHURCH MUST WAKEN

Zephyr, Sept. 2—Rev. Geo. Murray resumed the services at Zephyr United Church last Sunday after a vacation spent at Elgin and other parts of Eastern Ontario.

The sermon was based on the text, "He looked for the city which hath foundation, whose maker and builder is God." "It makes all the difference where our vision is—what we are living for and looking for in this world," Mr. Murray said. "Abraham, amidst the abundance of all his material possessions, was not wholly content with them. He had his gaze upon the city of God. It was this vision that enabled him to live a life of faith in a land of promise. He had learned the secret of a happy life—to set his affections on things above."

"Amidst the changing scenes of our so-called advanced modern world, when the destructive forces of man's inventive skill are playing havoc upon life and property, (such as we see in Spain and Shanghai), what is our consolation and hope? It is vision of the unseen yet real city of God which hath foundation—not even the blasting forces of militarism can destroy."

"One wonders at the apathy of the Protestant church today," said Mr. Murray, who saw in one of our cities a large placard on a church door, "Closed during July and August." "Is this a time to close churches? The sooner the Christian church awakens out of its deadness, the better for our modern world. We cannot save the world from its sin with believers who are dead in trespasses and in sins, we need the quickening power of the Holy Spirit to make us alive unto God."

"All through Leningrad all palaces were built with peasant labor. Leningrad is built on a swamp. There are thousands of wooden piles under the buildings. The peasants died like flies in doing the work. The magnificent palace of Peter the Great has an elaborate garden of fountains like the palace of Versailles."

"The population was not starving. In Moscow we visited the parks of rest and culture. We saw 75,000 people there. We visited a children's park, where there was every sort of workshop, gardens, dancing schools, playgrounds, supervised and directed by people who knew what they were doing. There were 5,000 or 6,000 children, one of these parks on an ordinary day. It was one of 20 parks or so in the city."

"There is no question in the mind of the average person about going back to the old days. They were tremendously enthused about the polar fliers."

back," said R. C. Swerdfefer, manager of the Aurora co-operative.

"The idea is to help each other," he said. "The best co-operators don't think about what they are getting back. Some don't take their purchase dividends, but leave them to accumulate as shares."

"The press misreported me in one particular last week. What I said was that the people who have been most successful in exploiting their fellow men, and have been considered the best business men, are the people who are looked up to and welcomed on boards of trade and the churches. I don't want to give the impression that the man who is dishonest is welcomed into the church."

"We as individuals have grown up in an order that practises things that aren't Christian. We fight each other to get all we can."

"The public is paying a tremendous toll to keep the ball rolling. A box of cornflakes contains a lot of advertising, a colored box, but little food."

"It is a lot easier to talk co-operation than it was four years ago when we started. At that time you might as well have talked to a window-pane as to some people."

"It is a different proposition today. Look, for instance, at the publicity which The Newmarket Era gave the meeting last week. That is a wonderful tribute to a small group of people meeting together. The magazines are featuring articles on co-operation. Today the public is aware of the co-operative way of doing business."

"There is nothing permanent about the prosperity we have now."

"The profit toll, sometimes a very small profit, is just a part of the public's purchasing power extracted from it and put into the hands of a few people. Two per cent of the people of the United States get 30 per cent of the income. Ten per cent get 35 per cent of the income. Forty-two per cent get only ten per cent of the income."

"You will find that the same condition exists in Newmarket. A few people are getting more than they need. A lot of people get less than they need. "Co-operation is solving the distribution problem in the United States. One oil company took $275,000,000 from ten states in a year. That was equivalent to the value of all the land and buildings in two counties."

"Farmers in the United States started producer co-operatives, and then got the idea of buying their oil and gas together, and then they went into other things."

"In Aurora we set our objective at 100 members and $500. In three weeks we got 80 members and $300. I think the people of Newmarket are quite aware of what has been going on in the United States and European countries. We had exactly 100 members when we started."

A former chain store employee was present and said that in the store where he worked everything was "charged in" at the same price as it was sold, and that the store had to pass along to the public any shrinkage or breakage by short-weighting them or overcharging them."

"If a store manager breaks a bottle of olives, he must get the extra profit somewhere else to pay for it," commented Wesley Williams, chairman. "The employees are almost forced to be dishonest."

"Are there any stores besides the Aurora co-operative?" someone asked.

"There are about 1,300 reported in Ontario, but many of them are far from being co-operatives," said Mr. Swerdfefer. "There are two very successful stores in Toronto. There is one in Dundalk. There is one in Woodbridge, paying two and a half per cent dividends. There is one very successful one at Timmins, operating two branches. A young fellow we know has just gone up there from Toronto to be a full-time educational secretary."

"One store here with 100 families would be a good-sized store, doing $30,000 a year."

In answer to a question Mr. Swerdfefer said that when there were enough retail co-operatives they would form a wholesale house. Even now, he said, his store joins with the two Toronto stores to buy tea from a Scottish co-operative wholesale.

And Hepburn said: "NO-MR. FARMER" "YES-SIR JAMES"

What has happened to the promises Hepburn made to the farmers of Ontario before he was elected?

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
A special session of the legislature to deal with farm relief problems immediately after the election.

What Hepburn Did:
Nothing! He said: "The farmers must stand on their own feet."

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
Help in improving livestock, grants to help agriculture.

What Hepburn Did:
He wiped out the Farm Loan Board—stopped bonuses for pure bred sires and grants to junior judging competitions—cut off $300,000 in grants made by the previous government to aid the farmer.

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
Wider markets and better marketing facilities.

What Hepburn Did:
He closed the marketing agencies at Montreal, Winnipeg and in the Maritimes—closed Ontario House in London, England, which had created markets thereby increasing Ontario farmers' annual income by $10,000,000.

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
A string of cold storage warehouses across Ontario, for the benefit of the farmer.

What Hepburn Did:
Nothing!

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
Reduced taxation.

What Hepburn Did:
He collected in taxation 80% more than was collected in the last year of the Conservative Government, of which the farmers paid their share.

What is Sauce for the Goose ... Is Sauce for the Gander

BUT—while Mr. Hepburn was saying to the farmer "you must stand on your own feet" and was cutting off $300,000 in agricultural bonuses, he was passing on a bonus to Sir James Dunn of the Algoma Steel Corporation of almost a like amount of the taxpayers' money.

Agriculture and industry are both vitally necessary to the prosperity and welfare of the Canadian people. The farmer says, however, that "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander—why take away our bonus to bonus Sir James Dunn?"

Succession Duty Evaders Forced Vote - Hepburn

No Government Has Kept So Many Promises, Morgan Baker States

MORGAN BAKER NAMED

Asking to be judged on his record, and declaring that the reason for the election was litigation which was holding up his investigation of under-valued estates for succession duties, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn was the principal speaker at the North York Liberal nominating convention at Richmond Hill on Saturday night.

Morgan Baker, M.L.A., was again chosen candidate, with no other names suggested.

J. H. Naughton, Toronto barrister, president of the association, was in charge of the meeting.

Reeve J. A. Greene of Richmond Hill made a slight slip in welcoming Mr. Hepburn to the village as the "hon. Mr. Mitchell."

"We wish to express our thanks for the services you have rendered this province," Mr. Greene said.

In nominating Mr. Baker, Reeve J. P. Jefferson, of King Township, spoke of him as "a man of integrity, a man of ability, a man who is out to help the common people, a man who has given backing to a government which has brought back prosperity to the people of Ontario."

"That government went right at the root of the trouble, to get cheap money, so that we can pay our just debts," said Mr. Jefferson.

"That government has taken hold of succession duties and collected thousands in past due succession duties. I believe that we could do no better than to have Mr. Baker represent us again."

MORGAN BAKER

In seconding the nomination a North York township delegate urged following "the happy highways with Hepburn and not to take a detour, as Conservative government has proved in the past."

Mr. Naughton led three cheers for Mr. Baker, following his unanimous selection.

"I know no act in my life that would justify the saying of all these nice things," said Mr. Baker. "Having been around the riding and heard other things, however, those words were not hard to take."

"I look to the future with confidence, feeling that the prime minister of Ontario will be re-elected."

Water Rate Lowered To Commercial Users

Council Discusses Suggestion To Install
Meter System

A motion for a slight reduction of the water rates of commercial users was brought before the town council on Tuesday by Councillor Howard Bunn, chairman of the waterworks committee. The reduction is retroactive to April 1.

The new rate will be 10 cents per thousand gallons for the first 100,000 gallons, with a seven-cent rate on each thousand gallons used thereafter. The rate will not affect St. Andrew's College or the Collis Leather Company, for whom separate contracts exist.

Mr. Bunn further recommended that accounts be rendered monthly and that a penalty of five per cent be imposed on payments that were a month overdue. This was also adopted.

Test work should be commenced in the near future to locate another source of water supply, Mr. Bunn felt. The town, he stressed, was now dependent on only one source. If anything happened to that source, he said, the town would be in a calamitous position.

Mr. Bunn outlined a plan for the installation of water meters. This, he believed, was necessary to cut down waste. The meters, according to the plan, could be installed over a period of several years, but no one would be charged on the meter system until all had been installed.

"Many other towns on 'meters,'" Councillor Lorne C. Lee asked.

"Newmarket has meters," Councillor John Stuart said.

"Business places should be on meters," Mr. Lee suggested.

"Water is a blessing and it seems a shame to curb its use to residents."

"Many waste water, and continue to do so in spite of dry weather, under the present system," Mr. Bunn said.

"I would like to have an estimate of the cost and a plan of how the meters are to be installed," Mayor Dr. C. R. Boulding stated.

"It would cost approximately $12,000 for the meters," Mr. Stuart said.

The matter was referred back to the committee for an estimate on cost and a detailed plan of installation.

AURORAN HURT IN AUTO COLLISION

Mrs. Fred Turp was taken to St. Joseph's hospital in Hamilton on Monday as a result of an auto collision in Aldershot which occurred when the car driven by her husband collided with that driven by Dan Damario, Aldershot. She is suffering from a compound fracture of the left ankle, cuts about the face, and shock.

It was the intention of the organization to hold a meeting every week. The Era learned from W. C. Waite, president of the local organization, on Tuesday. It has been found wise to postpone the meeting this week, however, and the next meeting may take the form of an outing, to be held next week.

Report Shows Committees
Spending Well Within
Appropriations

A report presented to the town council on Tuesday by J. G. McDonald, treasurer, showed the town to be in a favorable position.

Taxes received for the first six months of 1937 total approximately $37,000, compared with about $18,000 collected during a similar period last year, due to the change in manner of collection.

An auditor's report, also received by the council, showed that only slightly more than 40 per cent of the appropriations had been spent in the first six months of 1937.

While Aurora continues to be free from infantile paralysis, it has been decided, in the interest of public safety, to postpone the Firemen's street dance and parade, scheduled to be held here tonight.

No date has been set for the entertainment, and it is not likely to be held until there is a definite change in the progress of the epidemic. If the weather later in the season makes it impossible to hold the dance on Yonge St., it will be held inside.

Purchasers of tickets are therefore assured, The Era learns, of getting full value for their money.

The Royal Theatre is, on its own initiative, doing its part to prevent any infection spreading amongst the children. As a precautionary measure the management has asked all children under 16 years of age to refrain from attending the theatre. The matinees, which are held every Saturday afternoon, have been cancelled until further notice.

Many of the Sunday-schools will not hold services for children until danger from infantile paralysis is past.

"If Aurora can keep free of infantile paralysis, and I hope it will, we have the people to thank for their splendid co-operation," Dr. W. J. Stevenson, medical health officer, stated on Tuesday.

Three firsts and three third awards were given to the Talaurora Kennels at the Canadian National Exhibition on Tuesday.

The dogs entered by Dr. C. R. Boulding, proprietor of the kennels, were all wire-haired fox terriers. They drew a first in the puppy class, a first in the Canadian-bred class and a third in the open; a first in the open class for males and a third in the open class for females.

The Talaurora Kennels are to be congratulated, particularly on the awards gained in the open classes as the imported dogs dominated the show in numbers, at least.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Case for their hospitality and to all who joined in singing God Save the King.

Mrs. John Morning spent a week at Wasaga Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Lacey attended the corn roast at Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Case's last week.

A number of farmers have finished harvest for another year and all speak of the bountiful crops.

The new teacher, Miss Hunter, is wished every success.

A New York insurance man, J. Jay Watson, who was brought up in Aurora, visited his birthplace at Schomberg last week.

Under the title, "A Spot Dear to Many," he jotted down the following impressions: "From the street at a distance we see a meeting-house on a hill, and a burying-ground within the enclosure."

"We motor to the gate, over which we read an inscription on a bronze plate, recording the establishment at this site of a Friends' meeting by pioneer Friends."

"Beginning a century ago with Friends, the burying-ground has been sacred to those of succeeding generations. In recent years the boundary lines have been extended, and the enlarged grounds are used as the Schomberg cemetery."

Recent visitors here tread softly the ground sacred to the memory of the departed. The oil in the lamp of memory feeds and fans the light of immemorial happy events and experiences, both remembered and recorded, of those of their family gone before. The gentle breezes, and the sunshine filling the air, make music and beauty that with fond memories, bind one's affections to this spot.

The Quaker meeting here was dear to generations of Friends. It was a religious home through which flowed the thought of increasing spiritual vitality, for Life is a gift which acquires greater value every day."

Collection Of Taxes Improves This Year

Report Shows Committees
Spending Well Within
Appropriations

A report presented to the town council on Tuesday by J. G. McDonald, treasurer, showed the town to be in a favorable position.

Taxes received for the first six months of 1937 total approximately $37,000, compared with about $18,000 collected during a similar period last year, due to the change in manner of collection.

An auditor's report, also received by the council, showed that only slightly more than 40 per cent of the appropriations had been spent in the first six months of 1937.

Will Seek Higher Subsidy On Traffic Light Expense

Point Out Aurora Traffic
Largely From Out-
Side Sources

Correspondence concerning actuated traffic lights, such as the one now installed at the corner of Eagle and Yonge Sts., was read to members of the council on Tuesday night.

Letters to Toronto and Montreal authorities brought replies that the lights were extensively used and with good results. Fifty similar signals were working very satisfactorily summer and winter in Montreal, it was learned.

A letter to the provincial department of highways, asking for a 60 per cent subsidy on the installation of an actuated traffic light at the corner of Wellington and Yonge Sts., brought two replies. One stated that a 50 per cent subsidy would be granted. The other asked for reasons why a subsidy of more than 50 per cent should be given.

Because most of the traffic handled would consist of autos travelling from outside Aurora, the council felt that a higher subsidy should be granted.

"If our population were under 2,500, I understand the province would pay the entire cost of installation," Councillor Lorne C. Lee stated. "We are just over the 2,500 mark."

A suggestion from the company which manufactured the signals, to the effect that it might be wise to install two push buttons, which would permit pedestrians to regulate traffic so that they could cross the streets more easily, was deferred until further information was obtained from the department of highways.

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

"Off To The Fair!"

"Is it to be Thursday or is it not?" demanded my better half on Monday evening of last week. "Where—what time—why?" I asked, when I got my mouth sufficiently closed. "To the C.N.E.—where else would I be planning to go," he returned, amazed that I didn't know, there was only one place in these two weeks worth going to.

"Oh certainly, of course, Thursday," stammered, and so it came about that Wednesday evening was a busy one at Ingleside. While friend husband industriously applied white paint to the verandah, I just as industriously applied white polish to our shoes, and then as the light failed we retired to the house, where mother and I proceeded to collect various picnic necessities, for we always take the car into the grounds and have our dinner in it.

When morning arrived, I beat the sun getting up. Don't tell me that cats do not sense any change in the routine to which they are accustomed. Every step I took that Thursday morning, I stepped on a cat, or got one tangled between my feet. But at last our breakfast and theirs was eaten, and we proceeded to pack the car.

"Did you put all the windows down?" queried my parent. "Did you know Puff was in the house?" demanded the head of it, and "Have you got your set of car keys?" he continued, knowing my weakness for leaving absolute necessities safely at home.

The windows being down, the cat put out and the car keys exhibited, we climbed into the family chariot, and were on our way.

On reaching Yonge street we felt like the old Russian emperors must have felt, when they had the streets cleared before they went abroad, for we met hardly a car. The morning was beautifully fresh, although one sensed the day would be hot, and the lawns and gardens were green and bloomy bright. Reaching the city we picked up a cousin and deposited mother with friends and were off to the fair.

Never have I seen the lake so beautiful—each sharp little wave let was tipped with a diamond, that sparkled and glistened like a crown jewel.

We were earlier than I ever remember arriving before—the buildings hadn't opened, so we sat and watched the people arriving.

Of course we were struck as everyone else is, this year, by the absence of children. We expected it, but something is definitely gone from one's enjoyment, when no small creatures go tearing round, mad with excitement and the pure joy of living.

The first building we entered was the women's building, we wanted to see the coronation procession. Just inside the door to the left, we found what we sought.

There were the dolls—the king, the queen, the little princesses, Queen Mary and all the rest. Robes and jewels all were beautifully copied and the whole presentation was an exquisite piece of work, and gave one a more perfect idea of the costumes worn than a hundred pictures; for the colors were beautifully soft and rich and the jewels sparkled most convincingly. When we left the dolls, we looked at some beautifully decorated cakes, and in fact, at all sorts of cooking. My cousin and I felt that either we were poor cooks or the judges didn't know their judging, for in no case, we couldn't see eye to eye with them, but I suppose the "proof of the pudding is in the eating". The quilts, it seemed to me, were more numerous and more beautiful than ever. One of water lilies and cat-tails was lovely, as was also a daffodil spread. The exactness of color and line was rather amazing, and certainly very effective.

When we left the women's building, we became adventurous—off we went to Australia, where we encountered strange birds and beasts. We fell completely in love with the little Koala bears—so like Teddy bears. They were small and cuddly and the very pleasant young woman in charge of the exhibit assured us they made delightful pets. We saw a kangaroo, which we felt was as large as we would care to meet, but we were told it was very young, and when full grown would attain a height of 14 feet.

Then there was a snakey thing—I thought a lizard—marked beautifully—just like fawn silk with a pretty pattern. It was about three feet long—it also grows large—about six feet long, and is a great pet too. It might do for some—but not for one afflicted with nightmares. We went to New Zealand, too, and saw the war cannons, and native meeting house, native weapons, and many attractive things from that far land, but by this time we felt inclined to agree with Napoleon when he said that an army marches on its stomach, and that we had better seek the car. We found this easier said than done, for neither of us had ever thought to fix any point near it, in our memory. But at last, by a sort of process of elimination we found it, and flung ourselves down on the cushions, and drank in the lake breeze and waited for the male member of our trio.

But now, as I wish to retain the good opinion of your editor, by leaving a little space for some one else, I say, like the novelists, "to be continued."

TREASURE HUNT

—By Barbara Webb

SYNOPSIS

Belinda Louise (Lindy Lou) Hillcrest received a letter in New York telling her of treasure hidden at Twinoaks her former home in the south. She confided the news to handsome Anton Homans, who laughed at it and forbade her going to search for the treasure. He asked Lindy Lou to marry him and the day after they became engaged left on a long sea trip. Now Lindy Lou is at Twinoaks. Arrived there, she renewed friendship with young Lee Beverly, who farms the Beeches, the adjoining plantation. Lee objected to Lindy Lou's staying alone at Twinoaks and she promised to spend the night in the village, after Lee showed her evidence of prowlers around the place. But instead of going, Lindy Lou found what she believed to be a true clue and stayed until after midnight. Hearing footsteps upstairs, she went to explore, was seized and thrust into an empty room under lock and key. She spends a terrified night there. In the morning Lee comes for her and takes her to the boarding house in the village.

CHAPTER 16

In Matchmaking Hands

"Land sakes alive," exclaimed Mrs. Jackson as the disheveled-looking Lindy Lou came up the brick walk. "What on earth ails you, child?" but in spite of her exclamations of dismay she put her arms around Lindy Lou and gave her a hearty kiss.

Lee explained, for Lindy Lou was speechless and suddenly dreadfully tired and almost in tears. "She had started to leave last night, Mrs. Jackson, and then back upstairs to get something she had left behind. The wind blew the door shut on her and she was locked all night in one of the upper bedrooms. I got her out just about an hour ago."

Mrs. Jackson threw up her hands. "Land sakes alive," she exclaimed again. "You must've been scared plumb to death alone in that old house. You look all done in, clear tuckered out. Now you come right along in and up to your room. I got it ready for you last night, and after you've had a wash I'll bring you a cup of good strong tea and you'll feel better right off."

"That's right, Mrs. Jackson, you take care of her," said Lee. "She needs to be looked after, for she's had a bad scare and a troubled night."

Lindy Lou held out a limp hand to thank him. She wasn't sure just at the moment from the way her knees wobbled that she could get in the house and up the stairs. Her face was drained of color and there were deep circles of fatigue under her eyes.

"What she needs is a good, long sleep," declared Mrs. Jackson, putting an arm under Lindy Lou's and leading her up the steps to the porch. Lindy Lou was too tired and ill to notice the curious stares that followed them. Lee stopped to speak pleasantly to the ladies assembled there, most of whom had known him since he was a little boy.

"Miss Hillcrest's little girl's turned out right handsome, I see," said one of them with a meaning smile at Lee.

"You'd never guess how handsome until you see her with her face washed," Lee answered, laughing. "Well, be good to her, Aunt Sarah and the rest of you, too; she'll be here alone for a spell, I think."

"Her mamma and papa's coming down after a little," the one he called Aunt Sarah surmised.

"Yes, in a week or so, I believe." And Lee turned away, wishing to escape any further gossip about Lindy Lou's affairs. He took off his hat, made them a collective bow and then went down the walk whistling, hoping devoutly that they would not ask Lindy Lou too many questions she could not answer.

After his ear had disappeared they dragged their chairs together and began to mull over this choice bit of news. One and all they loved and looked up to the young man. He was the only young man of old family who had stayed in Threeforks instead of going to the city to make his way. The Beverly family had stood for generations for all that was best in the life of the little community and these old ladies, living much in the past, felt a proprietary interest in Lee and all that he did.

"He'll come courting now," said Aunt Sarah with a sigh. "And I hope she's a likely girl. Even though she's from New York, she's a southern girl by birth and the Hillcrest family isn't bad at all."

Heads nodded. The Hillcrest family wasn't up to the Beverly tribe in their estimation, but still it was an old Southern family and Lindy Lou had been born at Twinoaks, quite a point in her favor. And then, too, there was something highly romantic about Lindy Lou's arrival, about her being locked in the house and about their beloved young Lee's rescue of her, a maiden in distress. So they sat in the warm sun and gossiped and surmised and waited with what patience they could for Lindy Lou to come down.

Upstairs in a high-ceilinged room with a huge four-poster bedstead, Mrs. Jackson was ministering to Lindy Lou. Lindy Lou was disgusted with herself, for no sooner had the door closed than she began to cry, great tears rolling down her cheeks, to Mrs. Jackson's distress. Lindy Lou lay on the bed, unable to stop crying, and Mrs. Jackson ran a warm bath, helped the girl out of her clothes, clucking and soothing her as though she were a baby.

"You'll be all right, honey lamb; just you get in that tub and lie there while I make you tea. There, there, honey lamb, just you cry it out. It'll do you good."

Lindy Lou didn't know it, of course, but her tears and her evident weakness impressed Mrs. Jackson far more favorably than more modern conduct would have done. If Lindy Lou had kept herself calm and collected Mrs. Jackson might very well have nursed sundry suspicions into a hot flame of ugly rumors about the girl and her stay in the old house alone. But this helplessness appealed to her and she felt absolutely sure at the end of her ministrations that Lindy Lou was what she termed a "thoroughly nice girl, thoroughly nice."

Coming back from her bath, which had relaxed and rested her, Lindy Lou found the big bed turned back, showing spotlessly white, smooth sheets; the blinds drawn, and Mrs. Jackson hovering around with a breakfast tray. Lindy Lou slipped into bed, drank the tea, ate the toast and, almost before she had finished the last bite, sank back into the pillow and drifted off to sleep.

"Poor lamb," sighed Mrs. Jackson sentimentally, "poor lamb, I better tell Mr. Lee she's asleep; he seemed mighty interested," and with a final look at Lindy Lou the landlady went off to the telephone and recounted all Lindy Lou's activities to Lee, whom she reached at the Beeches.

Lee thanked her for the call, but grimaced as he hung up from the receiver and turned away from the telephone. "They've got us all married and settled here at the Beeches by this time," he thought, but the tight line in which he set his lips showed that he was not amused. He stared a moment around the long, low living room, furnished with pieces that would have seemed priceless to a collector. He let himself think of Lindy Lou walking familiarly around that room, sitting in that deep chair by the fire on winter evenings—Lee groaned to himself. "Better work it off," he said half aloud and went out to the yard, where Mose had saddled one of the new horses Lee had bought at the sale the day before.

Lee swung into the saddle and rode off for his morning inspection of the plantation. Crops were good this year, stock was well grown and healthy. Lee could see a profit on the place for the first time since he had taken it over after his father's death. But try as he would to turn his mind in other directions, the thought of Lindy Lou persisted, and finally he gave up and lost himself in the pleasant fancy that he was showing Lindy Lou through these fields and pastures, that she was riding at his side and seeing things through his eyes.

Back at the village the hours fled along. Noon passed and Lindy Lou still slept. One and two and three o'clock sounded from the church in the little square, and Lindy Lou only snuggled closer in her pillow and slumbered out her weariness. At five Mrs. Jackson came in and let the blinds up.

"You better get up now, honey, unless you're sick. Otherwise you won't sleep a wink to-night."

Lindy Lou yawned and smiled at her. "I'll get up now," she said. "I feel fine."

"I knew you would, and come down when you're dressed. All the ladies are anxious to talk to you."

Lindy Lou saw with some amusement that her bag had been unpacked. Her clothes hung in a neat row in the closet, and her underwear had been laid in a bureau drawer. Her dressing case, which was locked, stood on a chair and Lindy Lou pictured to herself Mrs. Jackson's chagrin, that she could not inspect its contents, too. Lindy Lou knew how kindly meant this curiosity was and she resolved to accept it for what it was worth. She put on a very simple white stockings dress with elbow sleeves, stockings instead of socks, white shoes, brushed her hair and allowed herself only a little dusting of powder to take the shine off her nose.

"I'll bet they still think rouge and powder are signs of the devil here," Lindy Lou reflected, after a last look in the mirror. Then she went downstairs to a bewildering number of names and faces, all friendly, but all curious.

"Sit right down," the old lady whom every one called "Aunt Sarah" commanded, "I want to hear all about your mamma and your papa and your brother Joe."

But though Lindy Lou spoke to Aunt Sarah they all listened and put in questions and at the end of half an hour there wasn't an item of family news that Lindy Lou hadn't related several times.

"Now," said Aunt Sarah, and she leaned a little closer and peered into Lindy Lou's face, "now we want to know just what brought you back to Twinoaks, Lindy Lou."

Lindy Lou smiled. She had been expecting this question and she was ready for it. "Well, most of all I just wanted to see the old place and our old friends here. Of course mamma was coming with me when I first planned the trip, but papa's illness prevented that. I can have just so much vacation and I didn't want to waste any of it, so I came along alone."

Heads nodded. "Were you aiming to do something about Twinoaks?" said Aunt Sarah. Every one knew the pace was held for taxes.

"I might," said Lindy Lou mysteriously. "I wanted to see what old things might be left there for one thing."

"Precious few," Mrs. Jackson broke in. "I helped your mamma pack five years ago, Lindy Lou, and I tell you there wasn't much left at Twinoaks."

"I know," Lindy Lou sighed, "but I wanted to be sure. And then—she had what she felt was an inspiration, an excuse that would leave her free to spend undisturbed hours at the house, and then I thought I might open a tea room and antique shop there. It's really a beautiful old house."

"They considered this. It was a perfectly new idea and hence needed thinking about. 'I don't know,' said Aunt Sarah doubtfully. 'I'm not up on all these new-fangled ways girls make money. When I was a girl they just got married and raised children the way the Lord meant women to do, but nowadays—'"

"Lindy Lou," said Mrs. Jackson, mildly, "though of course people drive through Threeforks in the winter on their way to Florida, and I do hear that many of them will go out of their way to look at antiques."

"I'm not at all sure of doing it," said Lindy Lou hastily, "just thinking about it, and I'll have to go over the plan pretty carefully before I decide."

"Look before you leap," said Aunt Sarah with approval, "and you might do worse than get married, yourself, Lindy Lou."

They felt rewarded by the color that leaped to Lindy Lou's cheeks. Girls didn't blush like that unless there was romance in the offing. "I suppose you and Lee been writing to each other steady," Aunt Sarah surmised rather than asked.

"Oh not too steady," said Lindy Lou, looking demure. But she had given them what they wanted, food for speculation, and the questions became less searching from then on. They wanted to know if women really did wear pajamas on the streets in New York and seemed disappointed when Lindy Lou said no, pajamas were worn mostly at beaches. Mrs. Jackson said Lindy Lou had some with her and Lindy Lou obligingly took them up to her room and let them all inspect her wardrobe, which they did with great satisfaction.

This ended with their all being summoned to the supper table and Lindy Lou found herself ravenously hungry. Hot biscuits, of course, and new turnip greens boiled with salt pork, mashed potatoes and apple pie and a cup of hot strong coffee with thick cream. Lindy Lou felt better every moment.

After supper she wandered out to the porch and stood leaning against a pillar. She had, of course, wasted a day of her treasure hunt, but she didn't see what else she could have done after that terrible night. The telephone rang and Mrs. Jackson came out. "It's for you," she said, "a young man—and I reckon I know who."

POLICE COURT
MAKE RAID ON
KING FARMER

"There is no evidence of reckless driving," Magistrate Ross Hosack of Toronto said in police court on Tuesday morning in dismissing a charge against Charles Brown following injury to a four-year-old child on the ninth crossing of Whitechurch on August 22.

The accused was driving at a very moderate speed, 20 miles an hour," the magistrate said. "If motorists are going to drive, children will have to be kept off the road."

N. L. Mathews, K.C., acted for the crown. A. M. Hulse, Aurora, was defence counsel.

Eldon Fairless, Whitebridge township, said that he and others were standing in a driveway of a house where he was visiting and that his own car was parked on the other side of the road, off the gravel.

"My boy, four years and two months old, had been across the road to my car," Mr. Fairless said. "I brought him back to the west side. My attention was attracted for a moment and he got back on the road. A car had gone south and Mr. Brown's car was coming north. It was too late to go across for him and I called to him. The north-bound car struck him."

"How fast was the north-bound car going?" asked Mr. Mathews. "I would judge at least 30 miles per hour."

Billy Tranner, ninth of Whitechurch, was called as a witness, and corroborated Mr. Fairless's account of the accident.

Constable Robert Windsor said: "Brown said that he had been going ten or 15 miles per hour, beer in the car," said Sergeant Brimacombe.

A telephone call to Toronto was necessary to secure the appearance of Royce Johnson, on $2,000 bail on a manslaughter charge. He had apparently forgotten that he was to appear in court here. He brought with him his grandmother, Mrs. Scott, to renew his bail. He was remanded a week for trial.

Wm. Wareham of Toronto was fined $10 and costs for catching undersized black bass in Georgina township. F. Lyons, game warden, gave evidence that "five fish were under eight inches and one was nine, and that they should be ten inches."

On a wages charge H. White, Yonge St., agreed to pay wages claimed by Gordon Meagher.

G. R. Davies, Ballantrae, pleaded guilty to a charge laid by Constable Robert Windsor of overloading a truck and was fined $10 and costs of $8.75.

Ewart Taylor pleaded guilty to a charge of carrying people on the running-board of a car at Lake Wilcox and was given two weeks to pay a fine of $10 and costs.

"The practice is very dangerous," said the magistrate. "We have a manslaughter charge now rising out of this practice."

John Small was fined $10 and costs on a similar charge.

Verne Scott was fined $5 and costs for speeding on Yonge St. R. J. Kelly, North Bay, was fined $10 and costs for speeding on Yonge St.

Richard Brown, Windsor, was fined $10 and costs for consuming liquor in an illegal place. The charge was laid by Constable Jack Williamson of Whitechurch.

Pleading not guilty, Jack Archibald, King township farmer, was remanded one week for sentence on a charge of having liquor in an illegal place. A charge of having liquor for sale was dismissed.

Chief Constable William Martindale, Sergeant Sidney Barracough and Sergeant Brimacombe gave evidence that they visited the Archibald house at 1.15 a.m. on Aug. 31 and found the accused and 11 other persons on the premises.

They found one dozen pints of ale and one dozen quarts of ale in a tub in the cellar, 24 pints of beer under the kitchen, and three dozen quarts of beer and two cases of pints in a place under the floor of the barn.

They also found a full bottle of whiskey and half a bottle of whiskey.

The constables said that Archibald had told them about the beer in the barn after they found the beer in the house.

Archibald's story was that he was just having a party for some friends.

"I was down in the city and some friends said how about a party Saturday night," Mr. Archibald said. "I said all right. They told me to take the beer up and that we would all pay for it."

"I put some of it down in the dry well in the stable. I had it made last year when my new barn was built. I use it for cream cans and milk cans. I didn't know there was any harm in that."

"Why was the beer not brought in for the party?" asked Mr. Mathews.

"Some of the people didn't come," said Mr. Archibald. "He said that he had a 175-acre farm that he wouldn't sell for less than $14,000 or $15,000, that he had a small mortgage raised to help build the barn, and that he was in good financial condition."

"How often do you hold these parties?" asked Mr. Mathews. "Every two weeks or so since before my mother died," was the answer.

"The question I want to get at is whether the barn is part of his residence within the act," said the magistrate.

"In the country people haven't the refrigeration facilities people have in the city, and they use wells and all sorts of places to keep things cool," said Campbell Line, Richmond Hill, defence counsel. He agreed that the barn did not fit in with the act's description of a residence.

Kidney Acids
Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss, lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy.

Dodd's Kidney Pills

Before the advent of the motor car and Hydro in Ontario, the farmer was truly "the forgotten man". The days were long—the nights longer and lonelier . . . farm labor was arduous . . . the housework drudgery . . . the young people waited their chance to get to the city.

Few realize how much Hydro has changed rural life in Ontario. Its coming brought every advantage enjoyed by city homes. Hydro lights the home and barn—pumps the water—washes the clothes—cooks the food—brings the world's best entertainment into the parlor. Today, the farmer has within his grasp the opportunity to make his home equal to the most modern city home—to operate his farm with the most modern labor-saving equipment.

Fully realizing that the greatest single contribution it could make to a better, more enjoyable life, and a more permanent prosperity to Ontario, would be to electrify every rural home in the Province, the present Hydro has left no stone unturned to extend the benefits of low cost power to Rural Ontario.

During the present fiscal year, Hydro will spend approximately four million dollars building over 2,000 miles of new line to serve approximately 10,000 new rural customers. At August 15th, 1937, over 1,500 miles had been built, and more than 7,500 new customers added.

Service charges have always retarded Hydro growth. Realizing this, the present Commission cut these rates in half in November 1936. Hundreds of rural users immediately applied this saving on new appliances for the home or for labor saving and profit making electrical equipment on the farm.

In addition to this reduction in the service charge, the basic cost of power was reduced in some systems by $2.50 per h. p. On August 1st, a further reduction was made of $3.00 per h. p. in Eastern Ontario, and $2.00 per h. p. in the Niagara System. The effect of these reductions will ultimately be felt in reduced consumption charges all over the Province.

Certainly Rural Ontario has gained as much, if not more, than any other section of the Province by the success of the present Hydro in cutting power costs and extending the benefits of low-cost power. There is no "forgotten man" in the Hydro policy of today.

Zephyr

Arrangements are being made for anniversary services to be held at Zephyr United church, which will mark 50 years since the present building was erected. The history of the congregation goes back about 90 years and, as at present, has always played a very important part in the life of the community. Fuller announcements will be made later, regarding the date.

"And yet there is room" was the topic of the sermon last Sunday. The words were taken from the parable of the great supper.

"As we study the context we are impressed with the teachings of Jesus concerning the Kingdom of God," Mr. Murray said. "He makes it very clear that it is not a narrow-minded affair such as some would make it out to be. It is not confined to a few who think they are the only ones prepared for the city of God. There is room for all who realize their need of God's saving grace. 'Come, for all things are now ready' says Jesus. Come and enjoy the unlimited blessings of His kingdom both in this life and that which is to come."

VAGABOND HOME

out putting it on my car, I would have been allowed to bring it in free of duty," Mr. Perry pointed out.

"We saw far too much of the drought in the west," Mr. Perry said. "Southern Saskatchewan is no place for anybody. There were many touching incidents. One hitch-hiker was a farmer with five children, who had moved in 1929 and had never had a crop. He was living on relief. He had not enough crop for feed.

"We visited a place called Carlyle in Saskatchewan. It was a poor year but they expected to get enough for feed. A few days before they expected to harvest, it came the grasshoppers. It is amazing how the people take it. Of course, there are hundreds moving out. The people are very hopeful.

"For a week we saw nothing but gray fields. If we saw anything green, it was something to comment on. You could look over the landscape and see dust clouds.

"The most fertile part of the west was the southwestern part of Alberta, around Lethbridge, where they were getting 35 to 40 bushels of wheat to the acre.

"In northern Manitoba we saw a flock of Franklin gulls in a field cleaning up the army worms they have been bothered with

RAYENSHOE FRIENDS HONOR POPULAR BRIDE

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Nighswander spent the holiday weekend on a fishing trip in Haliburton.

Mrs. Dwyer of Calgary visited at the home of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton on Wednesday.

A host of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Merton Rutledge on Thursday evening to honor Miss Norma Rutledge, whose marriage to Mr. Howard Stickwood of Madoc took place on Monday, with a shower. The numerous and beautiful gifts showed the esteem with which the young couple are held in this community.

The Y.P.U. presented Miss Rutledge with a lovely electric table lamp and an address was read by Miss Ruby Hamilton to which the bride-to-be made a fitting reply.

The services at the United church have been changed back to the regular time, 2.15 p.m., followed by Sunday-school. Everybody is urged to attend this service to welcome Mr. Fockler after his vacation.

Miss Madge Glover and a friend, Mrs. Lorne Paynter, spent Sunday at the former's home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Glover of Toronto have been spending a week with Mr. Glover's brothers. Everyone is appreciating the cooler weather.

This year, the gulls were nature's answer to the army worms.

"Quebec stands alone, racially, religiously, scenically. The highlight was Gaspe. That was a magnificent drive."

The city of Vancouver impressed Mr. Perry very much.

"Vancouver has about everything," he said. "Vancouver is prosperous too, except for the influx of people from the prairies seeking work and putting some of their own people out of work."

In Nova Scotia he found Peggy's Cove, a rocky little spot on the Atlantic coast, "indescribable."

"Canada is a big place when you set out to cover it all in a short time, and I am glad to be back home in Newmarket again," Mr. Perry said.
